

If the FCC wants to weaken Wisconsin's No Call list law, then I'd like the names and phone numbers of each Commission member so I can call them each night during dinner!

If I want to hear from someone peddling some service or product I'll contact them. My neighborhood pharmacy isn't allowed to walk into my living room each evening to sell me the latest pain reliever, bankers, nor anyone else, should be allowed to telephonically invade my home to hawk their wares.

If someone welcomes these calls, they have the right to not register their phone number with the no call list. I should have the same right to say "no thanks".

Wisconsin's No Call legislation is one of few laws passed that, I believe, most Wisconsinites have responded positively to. Take a look at the numbers - how many of us have registered our phone numbers with the no call list...that's how many of us do not welcome telemarketing intrusions into our lives.

To allow a special interest group an exception to this law only opens the door to other special interest groups requesting the same consideration.

So...once again, if the FCC wants to weaken Wisconsin's No Call list law, then I'd like the names and phone numbers of each Commission member so I can call them each night during dinner!

Let's talk soon...
